Create your own poster for an event (Hate Week from 1984 or the Reaping from Hunger Games) in your novel. This should be a means of propaganda employed by government to encourage conformity and public support. You may use computer art, magazine clippings, or your own drawings. Be true to the novel.	Using the five propaganda techniques generally used in advertisements (list found on website), give a definition of each, state a real life example of each, and write a specific example from the novel for each propaganda technique.	Create an epilogue addressing unanswered questions from either 1984 or your chosen novel. Be sure to accurately depict characters and style. (at least 5 well developed paragraphs).	How does the author of your book use figurative language? Provide at least five examples of figurative language in your book. Be sure to identify the type and explain the significance of the figurative language.
Using Winston and Julia and the two main characters of your chosen novel, compare/contrast Julia and Winston's idea of the Party and what rebellion means to each of them with the main characters of your book. Put your findings in a chart.	Select two characters from your book to discuss. Be sure to include two personality characteristics of each character, actions that support your characterization, and two quotes that reveal something about the character. Focus on how the character fits in the dystopian society.	Create a character analysis chart for the main character in your novel. Give at least four character traits and an example from the text of each. Each trait must be explained in at least one full paragraph each.	Select the three most significant quotes from your story. Be sure to identify the speaker, explain why it is special or important to the story, and explain what it reveals about the dystopian society.
Write a pledge of allegiance for your novel. It should be based on our pledge. If your novel contains a pledge, write a new one.	Describe the setting in your book. What is the time and place? Provide three examples from the book that describe the setting. Explain how the author creates a believable time and place. Be sure to include a picture.	Adapt your novel into a comic book (if it isn't already one). Create ten pages with illustrations and dialogue on each page. Focus on the main ideas, themes, and characters of your work.	Create a brochure that lists and describes the main social classes in your novel. Use color, pictures, and be creative. Decorate all panels and fill all space. Include relevant information.
